BETHEL, MAINE, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 21, 1904.

PRICE THREE CENTS.

Useful Christmas Gifts

At this time of year every one enters into the spirit of giving, and this is right for it is "more blessed to give than to receive."

You should select your gifts with a thought to their usefulness, then your gifts become of real value. We have large stocks in all departments, New Fancy Articles, Neckwear, Pillow Tops, etc., Jackets, and Suits this season's styles, marked down one-half price.

Mr. Freeland Howe, Jr., of Norway, Maine, has been engaged by the Pittsburgh Filter Mfg. Co., to start in operation and to run official tests on water purification plants which have recently been built for the cities of Gloucester, N. S., Sudbury, Pa., and Monessen, Pa.

If you are puzzled about selecting a present for father, brother, husband or son, read the advertisements of H. B. Foster and F. H. Noyes of Norway. These firms can be of much assistance, as they are extremely prompt to answer all orders received by mail. Why not try them if you want to make purchases in their line?

The opinion entertained by some people that all the progressive farmers in America are to be found in the great, wide West, is easily shown to be erroneous. The fact that the New England Telephone Company within ten months made 6000 contracts for farm telephones, is in itself an indication of the enterprise of eastern agriculturists.

Dr. A. G. Young, secretary of the Maine State Sanatorium Association, has received a letter from Dr. Weeks of Portland, saying that the people of that city have presented a piano to the sanatorium at Hebron, which building is practically completed, and will probably be ready for occupancy by another week. As is well-known, the object of the sanatorium is for the isolation, treatment and cure of persons affected with pulmonary disease, or for the treatment of tuberculosis in the earlier stages. The sanatorium was built under the authority of an act of the Legislature, by the Maine State Sanatorium Association of which Gov. Hill is president.

First English Christmas.
The first English child to enjoy a Christmas tree was Mary, daughter of Henry VIII, who was afterward known as Bloody Mary. When she was four years old a rosemary bush, hung with red jewels and silver spangles, and lighted with rushlights, was set up in the great hall of the castle, for the amusement of the little maiden who grew up to be such a cruel queen. From this little rosemary bush the custom spread until now no English Christmas is complete without the Christmas tree.

BORN.
In Newry, Dec. 17, to the wife of W. A. Foster, a daughter.

MYSTERY OF ST. RULE'S

By ETHEL F. HEDDLE

"My dear, my dear! This is very dreadful! But it must be there, Molly!" the Professor cried. "We left it there on the table. You must have forgotten, Lord Cantyre, I think, and put it into your pocket. I am apt to do that kind of thing myself, as David will tell you. I put everything in my pocket. She has told me that she has taken out as many as half a dozen match-boxes, and all kinds of miscellaneous articles. But I didn't do this, for I remember that you were looking at the jewel as we left the room; and yet—of course, if I were mistaken—it is quite possible I was mistaken."

He began turning out his pockets, producing indeed, as he had said, many "miscellaneous objects"; but the diamond was not there, certainly, and Molly put them all back, her hand on his arm.

"It wasn't you, Daddy; it couldn't have been you."

"It is mysterious, it is inexplicable. Examine the window," Marsland said.

"No, that's fastened all right. Any gardeners about, Professor? You have a fine old garden, I see."

"No, I only have a man in once a week, and this is not his day," the Professor said. "Besides, he is a most worthy man; perfectly honest. We could not think of him. I have known him all my time here. I have left him alone with cases of most valuable specimens."

"And the rest of you were all in the kitchen putting out the fire?" Marsland continued. "Did nobody leave the kitchen?"

"I left it for one," Bertie announced.

"I went up to the attic for the garden-hose. But I hope no one suspects me!"

He had flamed up furiously. Bertie's temper was always easily lit. Cantyre laughed carelessly, slapping him on the back.

"Of course we don't! We don't suspect anybody yet, though of course the diamond didn't walk off by itself. What do you think, Marsland? It's a clear case of magic."

"It must have been walked off with," the other said coolly. "Let me see, there are three doors to this room. The door we went out by, leading by a long passage into those stables. You shut the stable door, Professor, for the draught, and it was so dark in that passage that any one could have got in by that large back gate which opens to the front of the house, while you people were all engaged with your fire. That's one possibility; that's the outside possibility, as it were. I do not think we should have heard them. Indeed the gate was open. Then, of course, any one could have come in through the drawing-room. That's possibility number two."

"That's the house party possibility," Bertie interrupted rudely; "that means you or me, Miss Luttrell, for I met you on the stairs with the smelling-salts, did I not? All the others remained in the kitchen except Bertie, who went to fetch plumbers, and brought them back."

"Yes," said Eve coolly; "so far as that goes, either you or I had an opportunity of taking the diamond."

"Eve, don't!" The words came with a kind of sobbing breath from Molly, and Bertie turned round on her mockingly.

"Look at Molly!" he cried tauntingly; "I suppose she suspects us both. Out with it, Molly!"

"The third door," Marsland said then, breaking in upon them, "leads into the garden, though I don't think the thief came from there. He could not, if the door is locked, but it is entrance number three to the room. There's just the remote possibility that there was some one in the garden. I say! By Jove, the trick has been done from the garden! Look here! Look at this lock! Look at the door! The lock has been picked, and the thief has come in here, while we were out of the room, and has made off with the stone! It's too late now, I expect, but let's search the garden."

They went rushing out, the Professor with them, but Molly stood on the mat, with the broken lock in her hand. What did this mean? Was it not an unanswerable negative to the dreadful suspicion which had tortured her? Bertie would never have taken the jewel in this way. He would not have needed to break the lock. How wicked she was, how cruel, to have even thought of him for a moment!

She joined them then, but the garden search was unavailing, though Marsland searched well and long. They went in, baffled, and then the three men put on their hats and went up to communicate with the police.

CHAPTER XIII.

THE DISAPPEARANCE OF THE DIAMOND.

David, Mrs. MacLaren, the washer-woman (who had been also Uncle Geoff's landlady, and who had been summoned to assist in clearing up the debris of the fire), and Bertie, were seated round the kitchen table partaking of a late tea after the events narrated.

David had been considerably shaken by her fall and fainting fit, and she was also abjectly depressed over the whole state of affairs. The destruction of the china-press, and of the china itself, the destruction of her kitchen wall, the necessity for work-people, plumbers, painters, and paper-hangers in her domain, the thought of the clearing up, and of living meanwhile in what she called "an awful clutter mess and uproar" for a considerable time not to mention the overwhelming news about the diamond, had all conspired to cast David into the very depths of black despair. To say that she was cross, and to say that she was sepulchral, is very mildly to express David's frame of mind. Her tea-tasted like the waters of Marah to her that day, and her face expressed her feelings.

Bertie, on the other hand, seemed rather excited. The news of the loss of the diamond had gone through the house like wildfire, and they were all aware that Lord Cantyre was at that moment visiting the police-station.

"We'll have the police down the night, looking through a' oor boxes," Bertie said with a suppressed giggle. "I'll have to get up, David, and give mine a tidy. He'll be searching through a' the house, and I've nae doot that we'll baith be suspected. It's an awfu' like that, if I'd had any idee o' it, I'd never hae taen a place i' the toon. I dinna ken what my mither will say. Better if I'd bided i' Pittenweem wi' the Provost. Through I'm fond o' Miss Molly."

The aggravation of this speech was really more than David could stand, and almost caused her to choke with wrath. She put down her tea-cup, regarding the damsel with burning eyes.

"You and me 'll be suspected? I like your impudence! And ye 'dinna ken what your mither will say? Putting me in the same breath as yourself!"

"We've yet to get to the root o' the matter. The gentlemen were asking me if there had been any strangers i' the house within the last week, and of course I told them no. Ye see, it's the business o' the broken lock. I never gang near that door to lock it o' nights, when I dae the rest, for it's aye kept locked, and there's nae workmen been here to my knowledge, as I told them."

And the Professor has done without a bottle-washer for five days noo. So, as I was saying—What's the matter wi' the lassie noo? Sure as dait, Bertie, you're possessed the day!"

"David!" and Bertie leapt to her feet, cupping the entire contents of her cap over the table-cloth as she rose. But I hope no one suspects me!"

He had flamed up furiously. Bertie's temper was always easily lit. Cantyre laughed carelessly, slapping him on the back.

"What glazier? What broken pane?" demanded David, too much appalled to make any comment yet upon the stream of tea which was trickling into her lap, and had entirely submerged her toast. "I've heard tell o' no glazier, and there was none ordered to come here to my knowledge. Ye're dreaming, lassie."

"I'm no!" Bertie cried; "he was here the afternoon that you gaeed out! Rather a queer-looking carle, as I thought at the time; and he didna speak quite like any o' St. Rule's men. He said he had come to mend the broken pane i' the door—there is a pane cracked, David—so I just showed him in, and after a wee I met him comin' out; and he said his pane was too sma', and he would come back to-day."

"And ye never spoke o' that till this minute! Ye're a black-dyed sinner, Bertie, nae mair and nae less! But you'll come straight wi' me this minute, and tell Miss Molly and the Professor."

Bertie, unrepentant, but very much excited, accompanied the old woman then to the drawing-room, where Molly and her cousin sat alone, Professor Luttrell having retired to the laboratory as usual.

Both the girls looked up and listened intently when David told her story. Eve's heart sickened within her as she heard. This was Uncle Geoff, she told herself. He had not left for Dundee.

Molly, on her part, listened with an intense feeling of relief. How wrong she had been to think of Bertie—ever for a moment to have suspected him! She longed for him to return; she felt as if she owed him reparation, and apology, though it would not do, of course, to let him ever see again that she had suspected him. He had been passionately angry before at the very notion.

"I think this is rather important, David," she said gently. "The fact is, I fancied I saw some one in the garden when they return. Bertie must describe the old man very carefully. It is certainly a great pity that she did not tell you on your return that the man had been here, but she did not, of course, know how important it was."

"I suppose so," Eve was standing at the window, looking out into the soft darkness of the garden, where the great clumps of ivy on the grass made violet-blue shadows here and there. "It certainly looks very suspicious—still, one never knows. It is not safe to make too sure."

"But this man must have had something to do with it. It was clearly he who broke the lock," Molly said. "The putting in of the pane was a fraud, for he did not put one in."

"Yes, yes, of course! The thing will be to find him. It is a horrible affair!" the girl cried suddenly, turning round. "I had a presentiment of evil from the very first about this diamond. Why did he bring it here at all? Things like this affect every one. We shall live in an atmosphere of suspicion and distrust now till it is all cleared up. Do you think, Molly, that the police here are clever? Do you think that they will get on the track of this man?"

Her voice was strangely anxious; Molly did not quite understand the tone of painful eagerness.

"I hope so," was all she said.

And then the bell rang, and David

Eve went upstairs after that, leaving her cousin alone.

She dressed for dinner presently, and resolutely banished all care from her face. Bertie had not returned, but the fact caused no particular comment, as he was given to absenting himself from meals on many occasions.

Lord Cantyre and Mr. Marsland dined, and the conversation turned, of course, almost entirely upon the missing jewel.

"The superintendent was to call himself to-night, Professor," Cantyre said, after Bethia had put down the dessert and withdrawn. "He was not there when we went in, but we explained the story to a particularly dense policeman. I asked if there had been any suspicious characters about lately, and he said not that he knew of. He was a peculiarly silent man, stupid to a degree, I should say—eh, Marsland?"

"I should not have called him exactly a shining light," Marsland said, peeling his pear deliberately, "and if I were you, Cantyre, I should get a man from London. You need not do that openly, of course—he could live here on the quiet as it were, and make his enquiries. The description of the diamond is already in London. I telegraphed to Scotland Yard myself on our way up. No one will be able to sell it there."

"I don't know what Uncle Ralph will say," Cantyre said ruefully. "I begin to think you were right, Miss Luttrell, and that I ought never to have brought the diamond here. But who would have suspected a thief in innocent St. Rule's?"

"But the thief is not from innocent St. Rule's. I am sure this is an old hand," Molly said lightly.

The superintendent appeared about ten o'clock, and went to Professor Luttrell's study, where the three men gave him a minute description of what had taken place, Bethia also being examined. The girls did not go in, and later on Marsland accompanied the man up the quiet old street, on his way to the hotel. He was leaving for London shortly.

"I don't suppose you have any theory yet, have you?" he said, the superintendent having listened with almost no remark of any kind to all that had been told him. Marsland could not quite make him out.

"No, I'll have to think about it. Of course on the first blush it looks as if the thief had come from the garden, and been the glazier the servant tells us of. I'll make a pretty thorough search in St. Rule's to-morrow morning. I'm going down to the station now to make some enquiries there, and see who has come and gone lately. I doubt, however, if I shall be told very much. Railway people are seldom observant. It looks to me rather a longish business. A queer job altogether. You see, a man who would attempt a thing like that must have laid his plans pretty carefully. It was foolish of Lord Cantyre, very foolish, to allow the thing to be so widely talked of."

And then they parted at Marsland's hotel, and the superintendent went his own way.

Bertie was very late in returning that night, but the light was left burning for him in the hall, and he had taken the key. David knew better than to sit up for him, and the house was wrapped in silence when the young man entered, and looked into the drawing-room, where the careful old woman usually left sandwiches and claret in case he should want anything. The gas was turned down but the light was a little fire still in the grate, and some logs in the big brass box on the side of the fender. Bertie threw on a log, and stood in deep and absorbed thought, his hands behind his back. A very anxious cloud was on his face, and he was so lost in his reverie that he started violently when the French window opened softly. A woman stood on the threshold, and entered as if not perceiving him; when he came out into the firelight she started violently.

It was Eve, still in her evening dress, with a shawl thrown over her bare shoulders. She had started as if in fear, he saw, and for a moment the color left her face, but she recovered almost before he could speak.

Yet they looked at each other for a moment in silence before she tried to laugh, approaching the fire and kneeling down to hold out her hands to the blaze. It was very cold, and he could see that they looked chilled, as she did herself.

"I dare say you thought I was a ghost," she said lightly. "The fact is, I fancied I saw some one in the garden. It was very foolish of me, but I immediately threw on a shawl and went out to see. I had been sitting up reading."

"Yes, I think it was decidedly foolish," Bertie remarked frankly; "because, you see, if it had been a burglar, you might have got knocked on the head. Girls never think of consequences."

"Oh, I didn't think of a burglar! I am always on the lookout for ghosts, you know—for that phantom coach thundering down South Street, with a wild banging of the door—for the Cardinal's ghost in the Castle—" She stopped and shivered for a moment, remembering the very substantial ghost she had really met there.

Bertie, however, was inclined for more conversation; that is to say, he liked to hear the sound of his own voice. He was always fond of talking, if he could secure a good listener.

"I have been spending the evening with Cameron," he said. "You don't mind my taking a cigarette, do you? He's a good fellow, is Cameron, but I must say I don't quite understand him. All evening something has been puzzling me about him."

"What has been puzzling you?" "What bothers me," he said, "is that sometimes Cameron looks so deuced unhappy. What business has he to be unhappy? He's an awfully good fellow, no one knows that better than I,

Eve went upstairs after that, leaving her cousin alone.

She dressed for dinner presently, and resolutely banished all care from her face. Bertie had not returned, but the fact caused no particular comment, as he was given to absenting himself from meals on many occasions.

Lord Cantyre and Mr. Marsland dined, and the conversation turned, of course, almost entirely upon the missing jewel.

"The superintendent was to call himself to-night, Professor," Cantyre said, after Bethia had put down the dessert and withdrawn. "He was not there when we went in, but we explained the story to a particularly dense policeman. I asked if there had been any suspicious characters about lately, and he said not that he knew of. He was a peculiarly silent man, stupid to a degree, I should say—eh, Marsland?"

"I should not have called him exactly a shining light," Marsland said, peeling his pear deliberately, "and if I were you, Cantyre, I should get a man from London. You need not do that openly, of course—he could live here on the quiet as it were, and make his enquiries. The description of the diamond is already in London. I telegraphed to Scotland Yard myself on our way up. No one will be able to sell it there."

"I don't know what Uncle Ralph will say," Cantyre said ruefully. "I begin to think you were right, Miss Luttrell, and that I ought never to have brought the diamond here. But who would have suspected a thief in innocent St. Rule's?"

"But the thief is not from innocent St. Rule's. I am sure this is an old hand," Molly said lightly.

The superintendent appeared about ten o'clock, and went to Professor Luttrell's study, where the three men gave him a minute description of what had taken place, Bethia also being examined. The girls did not go in, and later on Marsland accompanied the man up the quiet old street, on his way to the hotel. He was leaving for London shortly.

"I don't suppose you have any theory yet, have you?" he said, the superintendent having listened with almost no remark of any kind to all that had been told him. Marsland could not quite make him out.

SILK BY UNCLE SAM

The Agricultural Department
Strikes Into New Paths.Cocoon Raising Profitable
Small Way.

For many years the Department of Agriculture has been endeavoring in various ways to encourage silk culture in this country, but it has met with little or no success. At the present time every strand of raw silk used in the United States is imported from Europe or Asia. Hardly a thread is reeled in this country; yet the Secretary of Agriculture and the entomologist of the department, believe it is possible to produce in the United States all the raw silk needed, which would result in a saving of millions of dollars annually.

They began their efforts to establish the silk industry in the United States by distributing silkworm eggs and silkworm food (mulberry trees) in different sections of the country where conditions were the most favorable for the raising of cocoons. They then advertised that the department would purchase at the current European market price all the cocoons offered for sale. The business was eagerly taken up by small farmers in the south and west, and the result has been the offer to and purchase by the department of several hundred pounds of cocoons every month. They proceeded on the theory that in order to make a success of silk culture in the United States it would be necessary to pursue it merely as a household industry.

Experience has demonstrated that the business cannot be conducted successfully on a large scale, whereas it can be brought to a profitable point if carried on as a side line and participated in by the children and feminine members of a household. It is estimated that from twenty to thirty pounds of cocoons can be raised in the smallest farm in six weeks' time, on which a profit of $30 or $35 may be realized, an amount which would form considerable of an item to many small farmers in this country.

Last summer Dr. Howard made a trip to the silk-raising countries of Europe—France and Italy—and visited a number of large estates, where the raising of silk is highly profitable. In Lombardy he visited an estate of 10,000 acres owned by an Italian nobleman. Dr. Howard also visited all the large silk-reeling establishments of France and Italy, and carefully studied the work. These silk-reeling establishments are called filatures, and the employees are composed largely of women and girls. Nearly all the women and children living in the villages where these filatures are located are employed in some capacity in the silk industry, while the husbands and sons work on farms. Whole families are thus engaged in the raising or reeling of silk. A child becomes useful at the age of five years, and the silk industry is, therefore, a highly profitable one to large families.

Upon his return last fall Dr. Howard recommended that the department purchase a four-basin silk reel with which to reel the silk from the cocoons purchased. In this way the department could provide a market for the cocoons, and the raw silk, sold in the open market, would help to defray the expenses of the reeling establishment.

Two four-basin reels were imported from France, and one of these has been set up in a building in the Agricultural Department grounds, where it is now in full operation. The other has been sent to Tallulah Falls, Ga., where a northern capitalist has purchased a farm of 3,000 acres with the intention of establishing a colony for the purpose of raising cocoons.

It is hoped and believed that from the operation of these two reels many American girls will learn the business of silk reeling. The women employed in reeling silk in the department are the only ones now engaged in the business in this country. They were brought over from France after great difficulty had been experienced in getting their consent to move to America. Both are expert reelers, and their work will be watched with much profit and pleasure by the thousands of visitors to the Agricultural Department.

Dr. Howard has been in conference with the Immigration Bureau officials, and it is expected that an effort will be made to secure a colony of Italians and to locate them on a large farm in California. A firm of Pacific Coast bankers has taken great interest in the silk industry and expressed a desire to become instrumental in fostering the business in the United States. This firm has agreed to assist financially in the enterprise, believing that it would be of value to the western country to establish a colony of silk raisers in the State of California.

Stalk Leveler.

The frame is made of two pine pieces six inches wide and two inches thick. They are joined together with pieces of old wagon tire, which has been straightened out, and two holes punched or drilled in each end to hold the spikes. The front ends of this tire iron are bent or hooked, to hold the chain to which the horses are attached. By using this contrivance when the stalks are stiff and hard with frost, they will break off clear and clean near to the ground, and can then be gathered up and burned, or made into manure.

Coffee—Its Abuses.

It is not the coffee but the cook who hurts you. Not three out of fifteen but gives you a beverage wholly or partly adulterated, abused and insulted by being left to stand on grounds that may have been warmed over one, two, or more times.

In an ordinary family it is easy to manage so that fresh coffee may be made for each meal for which it is used without waste. This is more healthful and quite satisfactory, and quite as economical in the long run as to make so much at first that what remains must be heated over.

Of all cooking utensils the coffee pot is most frequently slighted by hired help, and fortunate indeed is the housekeeper whose domestic can be trusted with the proper daily cleansing of the coffee boiler. If one wishes to save left-over coffee it is better to turn off the liquid into an earthen bowl or pitcher, throwing away the grounds and warming the clear coffee, than to stew over what is left.

It is a mistake to use soapsuds when cleaning a coffee pot; only clear scalding water should be used, and all of the brown film, so destructive of fine flavor, which collects on the inside, can be easily removed by a minute's brisk scouring with a tablespoonful of dry salt and a piece of heavy manila paper. Rinse thoroughly, and dry quickly on a warm griddle, and be well repaid for the little trouble by the improved flavor of your morning beverage.

Healthful Food, Drink, Shelter and Surroundings—Keep Animals Vigorous and Thrifty—Look Out Carefully for Digestion—Benefits of Cleanliness.

We should endeavor to prevent the appearance of disease, rather than to cure it after it has come. Sanitation, not medication, is what will reduce disease among farm animals to the minimum. Disease is by far the more common among swine than among other farm animals in this country. Annually above ten per cent of our swine die of disease. Yet there are men who have raised swine extensively for fifteen to twenty years with as little disease among them as among the best-kept horses or cattle. These men have reared pure-bred swine, and some of them are in the region where swine is largely fed. It cannot, therefore, be said that so much disease among swine is due to in-breeding, or wholly to the large feeding of corn. There is no reason why swine should be more subject to disease than other farm animals. The fact that they are, is because they are treated differently. Their quarters are allowed to become more filthy; they are given drink that other animals would not be expected to use; their feed is thrown in the mud and their own manure; and their shelters are of the poorest description and devoid of all means of ventilation. The men who have raised swine with little disease, have given their swine pure drink, a variety of clean, whole some food, comfortable well-ventilated shelters and clean, dry quarters.

It must not, however, be inferred that there is among other farm animals no more disease than there should be. If more care were taken to provide sheep, cattle and horses with only healthful food, drink, shelter and surroundings, it is safe to say that there would be much less disease among them. The investigations of European veterinarians, and of Drs. Law, Grant and others in this country, have shown that bovine tuberculosis is most prevalent among cows kept in damp, foul, unventilated stables, or upon wet land where the air and food are contaminated. In other words, sanitation and hygiene are opposed to bovine tuberculosis. Nor is this disease an exception. Sanitary measures are the best preventive of every disease afflicting our farm animals.

The preponderance of evidence is that swine-plague, bovine tuberculosis, foot-rot, glanders, etc., are produced by a microbe. However, it has been established without doubt that those conditions which are unwholesome to higher animal life are most favorable to the microbes which are supposed to produce these diseases. Thus, these microbes flourish in water contaminated with decaying organic matter, or in damp, decomposing litter; and while they are not introduced into the system through pure drink or food, they are introduced through foul, dirty drink and food of other than by any other means.

The manure recommended for the prevention of disease would also be desirable were no disease to be feared. It is firmly established that animals in low bodily condition are more subject to disease than vigorous, thrifty animals. That which makes the farm animal thrifty and vigorous, and therefore less liable to disease, also makes it profitable. The more wholesome the food, drink and surroundings of the animal, the stronger its appetite and the more thorough its digestion. It eats well, the excess above the food of support is at the maximum and as this measure the gain the profit is large. As digestion is vigorous the amount of food which escapes assimilation is reduced to the minimum. Where "poor condition" is not allowed to exist disease is scarcely known, and at the same time the animal makes the largest return for the food consumed. While we have need for a hundred veterinarians to each one we now have, their work, as that of the physician of the human body, will be largely in teaching sanitation.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS
The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews
"Indispensable." "The one magazine I feel I must take." "The world under a field-glass." "An education in public affairs and current literature."—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.
Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost. Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

Christmas Dinner.

"What do you want for a Christmas gift?" This is a question often asked during these days, though the little folks, at least, usually anticipate it by very early making their wants and wishes known.

But "What does the church want?" "What does it need?" These are questions which every church member ought to ask at the season that commemorates the birth of the Christ. And the answer will surely be: "The church needs more of that which Christ came to bring,—Peace and good will." More, because it never can have too much; more, because there is danger of crowding Christ and Christ-spirit out of the individual life and the life of the church as He was crowded out of the inn.

With this thought in mind, the Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church, at the suggestion of the pastor, have arranged for a free Christmas dinner to be held at Pattee Hall next Tuesday, Dec. 27, from 11:30 to 1:30 o'clock, for the members of this church and their families. Following the dinner will be "toasts," in which several out-of-town pastors are expected to participate. There will also be singing and a general good time. But the chief object in holding this dinner is, as we have said, for the purpose of reviving and intensifying the spirit which should dominate every heart at Christmas time, and every other time.

It has never been recorded which of the wise men brought the gold, the frankincense, or the myrrh as gifts to the infant Saviour, though these gifts were of such different values from a pecuniary standpoint. And if we, as a church, cannot present to each other gifts of great moneyed value, we can give that which is of far greater worth; cordial handclaps, bright smiles and helpful words. The Ladies' Aid Society, together with the pastor, wish to give such gifts next Tuesday to every brother and sister in the church together with their families. And, did you ever hear of people giving gifts in the hope of receiving something in return? Well, that is our desire in this matter. We want all who come to this dinner, to give us, and everybody else, similar gifts. Thus shall we realize more fully the true mission of the church towards its individual members. And thus also shall we realize the wonderful meaning of the song which the angels sang at the Saviour's birth, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men."

Reprehensible.

I do not like the acts some folks perform with far too little rarity. Nor can I cherish Christmas jokes, that savor not of Christian charity. But chiefly those I find, and deem their actions reprehensible, who at this season deem it kind to dole out gifts that they call "sensible."

As Usual.

Micky—Say, Swipsey, what do yer expect to have in yer stocking Christmas mornin'?

Swipsey (mournfully)—Holes!

Sunset Rebekah Lodge.

Sunset Rebekah Lodge, No. 64, is in a prosperous condition, if one is to judge from the number of new members, the increasing attendance, and interest manifested. At the regular meeting, last Monday evening, five candidates were instructed in the degree, making an addition of eight new members during Miss Mae Wiley's occupancy of the chair. After the initiation refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

On Monday evening, Jan. 2, will occur the annual installation of officers. This will be public to Odd Fellows and their families, and the Rebekahs will endeavor to provide such entertainment and amusement as will please the members of the subordinate lodge. Lodge will be open to guests at 6 o'clock.

Old People's Meeting.

Efforts are being made to make Sabbath next at the M. E. church an occasion for the ELDERLY people. The pastor will preach specially to them and special music will be provided if possible. Will all those who "used to sing" please meet Prof. Wight at Mrs. S. Little's at the close of the Ladies' Aid meeting on Thursday afternoon of this week, about 3:30 o'clock; and will the regular choir please meet earlier than usual on Sunday morning at the church. We hope that these efforts may be successful and that the day may be of benefit to our older folks.

Our prospective Christmas dinner is written up in another column.

The committee in charge inform me that the entertainment for Monday evening at this church will be very interesting. All the people are welcome.

After many years, another entertainment and tree will be given at the Mason church on Friday evening. A fine program, which will appear in printed form later, is to be carried out. The Mason school, under the instruction of Miss Bennett, and the Flat school, with Miss Ruth Bean as director, will supply the talent for recitations. Singers from Bethel village and West Bethel will assist.

Locke Mills also observes Christmas on Saturday evening by a suitable program.

May Christ give us the true spirit of the occasion, and may all be arranged and carried out to the glory and honor and praise of God in the highest.

Special meetings will begin under the auspices of the M. E. society and leadership of the pastor, on Thursday evening, Dec. 29, with a "cottage meeting" at the home of L. S. Morrill. A detailed list of times and places will appear later.

Christmas services next Sunday evening at 7 o'clock.

Christmas Thoughts.

We fly high and light exceedingly low if we imagine that we have entered the real spirit of the Christmas tide and appropriately commemorated the birth of the Saviour, when we have made and received gifts, eaten at the specially provided board, sung our carols and exchanged greetings.

All of this is to be appreciated because it is legitimate and gladens many a heart that has too long and too frequently dwelt upon its troubles, and therefore missed many of the blessings that come even to the poorest and unfortunate. And it is certainly to be appreciated in child life and youth which, for the most, under normal conditions, ought to be seasons of unbroken innocent pleasure.

But, to be most significant and helpful in its influences, the spirit must be awakened, the very soul enkindled, and the mind voluntarily and intelligently wend its joyous flight to that humble little village nestled among the verdant hills, vine-clad and dotted with olive trees and pomegranates in that far away sacred area of Palestine.

It must see once more how from those poverty stricken circumstances among the very beasts of that manger, came one who was to gladden the hearts of men, who was to cheer and bless the world, and impart such lessons of life, that no one need to err in the great essential principles of moral conduct and religious rectitude. How impartial that love, how free to all, irrespective of cast or color or circumstances.

Can such lessons as taught by his simple life, and the great mission which he filled, fail to soften our hearts, make them beat more freely to humanity and to make us strive amid all perplexing annoyances and difficulties to live a good life, devoted to every noble cause, and to respect all human beings as capable of reaching the standard of moral and spiritual excellence which we would choose for our friends or ourselves.

Christ simply illustrated in His own life the great essential principles which are possible for all men to gradually learn to apply to their own life until they become a part of their very being.

With at least some of these thoughts the legitimate festivities of Christmas may be a source of great pleasure and profit.

Christmas Decorations.

As the holiday season approaches decorations are uppermost in the mind. A false note is too often struck by having the rooms so laden with pine and holly that one experiences a sense of suffocation.

Over arches or doors a thick rope of ground pine is sufficient, and the green can be brightened by branches of holly. Holly wreaths tied with red ribbon will be sufficient for windows. Be sure when selecting the ribbon that it is a rich crimson, harmonizing with the berries. Vermillion color is too often seen and is entirely inartistic.

Charming effects can be produced with little outlay for the table. One dozen red carnations can be purchased in cities for 75 cents a dozen and the florist will add a few sprays of asparagus plumes without extra charge. A heavy wreath of holly will cost 25 cents. Place the wreath on a white embroidered centerpiece and stand the carnations in a green vase in the center, or one can use a crystal jar, or even a white one with delicate ornamentation. This decoration may be the use of a pink, yellow or yellow-green vase or jar. If a little more elaborate trimming is wished, place streamers of red ribbon, matching the carnations in color, at each corner, fastening a spray of holly with perfect berries on each.

It is not every housekeeper who can even invest in a dozen or even six carnations. These can buy a dozen of those blossoms made of French tissue paper which deceive the most observing.

Chrysanthemums and roses are made of paper these days so as to appear as natural as their models. These flowers can be used time after time for table decorations if they are placed in boxes and covered, instead of being left to collect dust and become crumpled. A small sum invested in hot house vines, to mix in, will make the artificial blossoms appear more natural.

The woman who looks far enough into the future and grows dots of crimson geraniums and the silver variety, also, will have a table decoration unequalled in effect by anything purchased. A crystal bowl filled with the red blossoms, having a border of the silver leaves, placed on a circular mirror, will prove delightful. Holly can wreath the mirror and sprigs of this plant be placed at each corner.

A low mound of chrysanthemums wreathed with holly or ground pine makes an appropriate table decoration. The blossoms should be scarlet and white.

Crystal candlesticks, hooded with scarlet, and wreathed at the base with holly, will add to the effect.

Fruit is always an appropriate and pleasant center decoration. A silver dish is preferable. A pretty china or glass bowl lends itself charmingly and the common chopping bowl, filled with winter fruits and nuts, placed in a wreath of holly, will prove a novelty.—Ex.

Modern Christmas.

The gaiety of the "Dickens Christmas" seems to have consisted chiefly of brandy, mulled wine and punch, drunk in enormous quantities; a "good old-fashioned way" of keeping Christmas, the loss of which need not quite move us to tears. When Christmas comes, we eat and drink less than we did; but the meeting of friends, the performance of kindly deeds for others, the greater readiness to forgive and to forget—this is the essence of the true Christmas spirit, and it is as strong to-day as ever.

KILLS CATARRH GERMS.

Breathe Hyomei and Be Cured of Catarrh—Costs Nothing if It Fails.

Breathe Hyomei for a few minutes four times a day, through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, and benefit will be seen at once. Continue this treatment for a short time, and your catarrh will have been cured by Hyomei.

There is no roundabout way in Hyomei's medicinal action; it does not try to cure a disease of the head by putting medicine in the stomach. It fills the air you breathe with balsamic healing, that soothes the irritated and smarting membrane, destroys the germs of catarrh that are present in the head and throat, and is the only treatment that can be relied upon to cure.

When using Hyomei the air you breathe will be like that of the mountains high above the sea level, filled with volatile, antiseptic fragrance that heals and cures the irritated mucous membrane of the air passages.

This treatment has been so successful, curing 99 per cent. of all who have used it, that Hyomei is now sold by G. R. Wiley under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it does not benefit. You run no risk whatever in buying Hyomei. If it did not possess unusual powers to cure, it could not be sold upon this plan.

The complete Hyomei outfit costs $1.00 and comprises a hard rubber inhaler, a bottle of Hyomei and a dropper. The inhaler will last a lifetime; and additional bottles of Hyomei can be obtained for 50c.

HAPPY WOMEN.

Wouldn't any woman be happy, after years of backache, suffering, days of misery, nights of unrest, the distress of urinary troubles, to find relief and cure? No reason why any reader should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. Almira A. Jackson, of East Front St., Traverse City, Mich., says: "For twenty years I was doctoring for kidney and liver trouble, but without benefit. Just before I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I was almost paralyzed. I could hardly stand on my feet because of the numbness and lack of circulation. Had a knife been thrust into my kidneys the pain could not have been more intense. My sleep was disturbed by visions of distorted figures. The kidney's actions were annoyingly irregular, and I was tormented with thirst and always bloated. I used seven boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The bloating subsided until I weighed 100 pounds less, could sleep like a child and was relieved of the pain and the irregularity of the kidney action. My circulation is good and I feel better in every way."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Jackson will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price, 50 cents per box.

Mooshead Hermit Dead.

Old John Cusack, the hermit of Moose island, in Mooshead lake, was drowned late Monday afternoon of last week, by breaking through the ice within fifteen rods of the shore.

John Cusack was about seventy years old, and has been known for thirty years or longer as the King of Moose island, of which he was owner and sole resident. He lived by farming, log driving and guiding, and was one of the most peculiar characters in Maine. His expertness with rifle and paddle and as the performer of daring feats on logs in rough water was known everywhere up north.

Disappointed in love early in life he retired to Moose island and there lived with no companion except a dog in a hovel. Years ago he chiseled a tomb for himself in a great stone on the island and there his remains will be laid. His relatives live in St. John, N. B.

RECTOR OF ST. LUKE'S,

Ashburnham, Ontario, Testifies to the Good Qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

ASHBURNHAM, Ont., April 18, 1903.—I think it is only right that I should tell you what a wonderful effect Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has produced. The day before Easter I was so distressed with a cold and cough that I did not think to be able to take any duties the next day, as my voice was almost choked by the cough. The same day I received an order from you for a bottle of your Cough Remedy. I at once procured a sample bottle, and took about three doses of the medicine. To my great relief the cough and cold had completely disappeared and I was able to preach three times on Easter Day. I know that this rapid and effective cure was due to your Cough Remedy. I make this testimonial without solicitation, being thankful to have found such a God-sent remedy. Respectfully yours, E. A. LANGFELDT, M. A., Rector of St. Luke's Church, To Chamberlain Medicine Co.

This remedy is for sale by G. R. Wiley, Bethel; H. W. Dennison, West Bethel; E. L. Tebbets, Locke Mills; J. W. Bennett, Gilead.

Zemstvo.

That kinky little word, "zemstvo," which appears so frequently in news from Russia these days, is derived from the noun "zemlia," meaning land and the verb, "voeet," to clamor. Thus it signifies "the voice of the land," and is a council of landed proprietors appointed to deliberate and report to the central executive the wants of the rural population. It is something like an English county council without the latter's authority, yet that is what it now pleads for. The zemstvo was founded in 1864 and Alexander II. intended it as one of the most important of his reforms.—Boston Transcript.

BERLIN, N. H.

E. J. Mahern was called to Boston last week by the death of his wife.

Christian Johnsen and Frederick Johnsen went to Boston last week to meet relatives and friends from Norway.

Miss Mary Cram daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. G. Cram, of this city, died very suddenly in Boston the 9th.

Cushman H. Parsons of Colebrook who was rescued after wandering two days and nights in the woods in the Phillips brook region, was taken to the Maine General Hospital in Portland soon after being brought out of the woods. Reports from the hospital are most favorable. His feet which were badly frozen are doing as well as could be expected and it is thought he will entirely recover.

A very pretty and simple wedding was celebrated at the parlors of the Universalist church at noon Dec. 12, when Miss Ellen Scarborough of this city was united in marriage to Joseph Streeter also of this city. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a few intimate friends of the contracting parties, by the Rev. Isabella Macduff, pastor of the church. The parlors were decorated by the ladies of the Universalist circle, palms and potted plants being used.

Work on the log chute and river wall of the International Paper company being built at the Mason street bridges by Frank B. Gilbreth, will soon be completed. The wall is already in place and about two weeks are thought to be necessary for the completion of the chute. The weather has been very favorable for this work, for though cold no severe storms have occurred for a long time.

The Berlin, N. H., high school building, a wooden structure three stories high, built twenty years ago, but recently remodeled, was burned to the ground Friday night. Only the three pianos, some of the valuable physics' apparatus and a few books were removed. The total loss is estimated at about $20,000. The building is insured for about $12,000.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Brooks are the happy parents of a son, born Wednesday.

The new car station or waiting room at the Cascades which is being built by the road and the Berlin Mills company, is nearing completion and will soon be ready for service. A path at present runs across the pond to the mills but this will probably be replaced later with a serviceable suspension bridge leading to the other side of pond and terminating centrally, thus affording easy access to all parts of the plant.

Alfred Dionne has returned from a very successful operation for appendicitis at the Sisters hospital in Lewiston.

Miss May Fink has returned to her home in Iroquois, Ont., after several weeks' visit with J. A. Laroche in this city.

Miss Mary Seguin who recently was operated upon for appendicitis has so far recovered as to be able to be out again.

W. A. Boothby was in Boston and New York on a business trip the first of the week.

Mrs. John Stewart and daughter, Miss Mary Stewart left Tuesday morning for a visit in Scotland.

H. H. Abbott returned the latter part of last week from Portland, where he has been for medical treatment.

No More Suffering.

If you are troubled with indigestion get a bottle of Kodol Dyspepsia Cure and see how quickly it will cure you. G. O. A. Thomson, of Spencer, Ia., says: "Have had Dyspepsia for twenty years. My case was almost hopeless. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure was recommended and I used a few bottles of it and it is the only thing that has relieved me. Would not be without it. Have doctored with local physicians and also at Chicago, and even went to Norway with hopes of getting some relief, but Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is the only remedy that has done me any good, and I heartily recommend it. Every person suffering with indigestion or Dyspepsia should use it." Sold by G. R. Wiley, D. W.

SUPERIOR RACIAL QUALITIES.

Difference Between Original Endowment and Education.

While there are superior and inferior races, there are primitive, medieval and modern civilizations, and there are certain mental qualities required for and produced by these different grades of civilization. The Chinaman comes from a medieval civilization—he shows little of those qualities which are the product of western civilization, and with his unattractiveness, routine and traditions, he has earned the reputation of being entirely nonassimilable. But the children of Chinamen, born and reared in this country, entirely disprove this charge, for they are apt in absorbing the spirit and method of American institutions as any Caucasian.

The Teutonic races, until 500 years after Christ, were primitive in their civilization, yet they had the mental capacities which made them, like Arminius, able to comprehend and absorb the highest Roman civilization. They passed through the medieval period and then came out into the modern period of advanced civilization, yet during these 2,000 years their mental capacities, the original endowment of race, have scarcely improved. It is civilization, not race evolution, that has transformed the primitive warrior into the philosopher, scientist, artisan and business man. Could their babies have been taken from the woods 2,000 years ago and transported to the homes and schools of modern America, they could have covered in one generation the progress of 20 centuries. Other races, like the Scotch and the Irish, made the transition from primitive institutions to modern industrial habits within a single century, and Prof. Brinton, our most profound student of the American Indian, has said: "I have been in close relations to several full-blood American Indians who have been removed from an aboriginal environment and instructed in this manner (in American schools and communities) and I could not perceive that they were either in intellect or sympathies inferior to the usual type of the American gentleman. One of them notably had a refined sense of humor, as well as uncommon acuteness of observation."—Chautauquan.

Struck Oil in Kansas.

Some strange things have happened out in Kansas. Oil has been discovered, and men who a few days ago were poor are now rich.

One of the most striking cases is that of a man named Frank Hetrick. He owned a farm near the town of Chanute, and had a hard time keeping the wolf from the door. He can neither read nor write.

His oil royalties now amount to $800 a month. He has just completed the finest opera house in Kansas. It occupies half a block in Chanute. He said he wanted to leave something for a monument.

Mr. Hetrick gives a box party at each performance, and Hetrick himself is always behind the scenes, seeing how the actors and actresses do things. They are having the times of their lives, and Chanute has become one of the best theatre towns in the west. Everybody has money, and it is flowing like water—or oil.

A widow who has been left 170 acres that, with her limited means of cultivation, barely furnished bread for her family of small children, has sold her place for $55,000 cash.—Washington Post.

The Meaning of "Turned Turtle."

What do they mean in naval affairs when they say that a ship "turned turtle"? It was used several times in the naval discussions in congress recently, but probably very few people attached any definite meaning to the expression.

When the natives of the South seas wish to capture a monster turtle, two of them get alongside him in a small boat, when one of them suddenly slips down into the water and by a dexterous move of the hand turns him completely over on his back.

In this position the animal is perfectly helpless. He can neither sink nor swim. All the captors have to do then is to hold him on his back until ropes are tied around his neck and he is ready to be taken into captivity.

J. Pierpont Morgan's Cigar.

J. Pierpont Morgan stepped aboard his yacht one day last summer visibly amused by an incident which had just occurred on the pier. It involved one of the magnate's large black cigars, which have already figured in many anecdotes.

"I ventured to ask one of the pier men for a match," said Mr. Morgan, "and in return for his courtesy I tendered him one of the cigars, which I value very highly. He accepted it promptly."

"Thanks to you," he said, "I was just out of tobacco."

"Then he broke it into bits and stuffed it into his pipe."—New York Herald.

German Silver from China.

"Just because it is called 'German silver' we have grown up with the idea that it is a German invention," says a manufacturer of spoons, forks and other tableware. "As a matter of fact, the alloy was in use in China in the time of Confucius. The Germans stole it and named it German silver. In its best form it is simply a mixture of copper, zinc and nickel, but most of the cheaper quality contains a little lead to make it easier to work. The finest German silver is like a white copper, and when plated with silver is very handsome and durable. And it is inexpensive."

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol cures indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure does not only cure indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy cures all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach.

Mr. S. S. Ball, of Ravenswood, W. Va., says: "I was troubled with sour stomach for twenty years. Kodol cured me and we are now using it in milk for baby."

Seagulls Got Seasick.

A sportsman at Mooshead lake found some young gulls, too small to fly, and took them into the canoe. The birds at first seemed to enjoy the experience, but soon became as seasick as any landsman. After each had sacrificed his latest meal to the sea myths, the sportsman took pity on them and put them back into the water, where they at once settled down as well and contented as if they had never left it.

The Soap Tree.

An enterprise in Algeria is to manufacture natural soap on a large scale from a tree known as "aspidin" utilized. This plant, which has long been known in Japan, China and India, bears a fruit of about the size of a horse chestnut, smooth and round. The inner part is of a dark color and has an oily kernel. The tree bears fruit in its sixth year and yields from 55 to 220 pounds of fruit, which can easily be harvested.

Windows Should be Wide Open.

There is the body; the instinct of the mind, which must be attended to quite carefully, or the mind cannot carry out its purposes. The body must be given plenty of fresh air. If it has work in a close, badly ventilated place during the day, it must have more than the usual amount of fresh air at night. The window should be opened wide, even if you have to sleep with your heads tilted up to keep warm. So long as the nose and mouth are free for breathing, we can cover ourselves with almost any amount of warm clothing; and to get our lungs used to the fresh air, we should take in or ten good long breaths before going to sleep.

We must always be careful, however, not to let the cold air in our lungs too rapidly, but to begin with gentle breaths before taking the long ones—always breathing through the nose, and never getting our lungs so full that the pressure of air becomes painful during the day if the work is done in a room that is well ventilated to stop and take one long breath about once in every half-hour will greatly help the restfulness of work. It is often possible to breathe fully and regularly without stopping work at all, and this is always especially helpful.

Walking to and from work help toward giving the body enough fresh air, and, if this is possible, it becomes necessary to take a little walk in the morning or evening, says A. Payson Call in the Philadelphia Press.

We should be careful to see that the body is well nourished. It can nourish our bodies on good food just as inexpensively as can starve them on food that is good, but does not bring us strength. When the habit is formed of taking only food that refuels us, we gradually learn to dislike others.

It is so much more comfortable to be healthy than not to be healthy that, when one's sense of health is well established, the body will instinctively cast off refuse everything which does not contribute to its health. Eat simply and quietly. Rest a little before and a little after eating, if only for five minutes.

It gives help—very great help—to both body and mind if, when you settle to sleep at night, you every thought of yesterday, to-morrow, and go to sleep much like a baby—as possible we begin by repeating words are restful or quieting or by thinking over the plot of a simple story, we prepare our minds for restful blanks.

The long breaths are an additional help, and giving up weight entirely, so that we sleep without tension, is the thing that helps us most to all the other restful habits.

If we once get started with interest in finding this way some way of working it will be pleasant to feel the contrast between that and the tired way we shall be almost glad to feel the weight of drudgery being we enjoy so truly and so heartily the discovery that drudgery becomes easy, and pleasant, and interesting, because of the way we do it.

But then, of course, it will longer drudgery.—Ex.

A Forlorn Hope.

HEATING WITH ONE STOVE.

How a Machinist Kept His Whole House Comfortable.

A young machinist bought a tiny cottage and believed that its four rooms could be heated from the cooking range, which had a water-tank attachment. Pipes of hot water were laid and connected with the tank of the range and a radiator placed in each room. An ordinary fire of hard wood was kept in the range and that little cottage was warm and cozy even in the most severe weather of the winter.—National Magazine.

The Faculty of Friendship.
Not many famous persons have the faculty for friendship in old age as Lord Beaconsfield had it. His passion for mastery, his addiction to mystery were rivaled by his immense faithfulness. While he was at Glasgow he was inaugurated lord rector of the university. He heard good tidings of an old associate, "Mrs. Disraeli and I," he wrote, "were overjoyed and we danced a highland fling in our nightgowns."

From New York to San Francisco by water around Cape Horn, the distance is 15,660 miles; the distance in statute miles from New York to the Pacific Coast by the principal land and water routes are as follows: By Southern Pacific railroad, 3,700; by Canadian Pacific railroad, 3,519; by Central Pacific railroad, 3,269; by Northern Pacific railroad, 3,237.

Magnetic Iron in Sand.
A curious sight on the coast of Java is a long stretch of shore, about twenty-nine miles in length, where the sand is filled with particles of magnetic iron. In some places it is said that the surface sand contains 80 per cent. of iron. It can be smelted, and a company has been formed to exploit the deposits.

Preservation of Corpses.
In recent European experiments corpses have been kept for a certain time in a bath of chloride of calcium heated to 123 degrees, then taken out and steeped for twenty-four hours in a cold solution of sulphate of sodium. The bodies are transformed into perfect mummies, which may be kept indefinitely.

The Primary Colors.
The number of primary colors were regarded by Newton as 7—red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo and violet. By many physicists only three primary colors are recognized; by Mayer (1775), red, yellow and blue; by Dr. Thomas Young (1801), red, green and violet; by Prof. Clark Maxwell (1860), red, green and blue. There are an indefinite number of secondary colors.

Discolored Bruises.
To prevent a bruise from becoming discolored, apply to it a cloth which has been wrung out of water as hot as can be borne comfortably, and change it as it becomes cold. Supposing hot water cannot be procured, the next best thing is to moisten some dry starch with cold water and to cover the bruised part with it.

Courtship by Handkerchief.
Whenever a single woman, among a powerful tribe in the Persian mountains, wishes to get married, she simply sends a servant to pin a handkerchief on the hat of the man of her choice. He is obliged by tribal law to marry her, unless he can prove himself too poor to pay the "compensation" her father requires.—Ex.

Peru, a Wealthy Country.
Peru is one of the richest countries of the world in minerals of all kinds—gold, silver, copper, mercury, iron, lead, sulphur, coal, salt, petroleum, etc. being found in great abundance—and it only requires the action of capital and labor to make the republic as renowned for its wealth as California, Australia or South Africa, says the U. S. consul at Callao.

DEW DROPS

A girl gets a queer idea about men, in spite of having brothers, as men get about girls, in spite of having sisters.

It sends cold shivers down a girl's spine to remember, after she gets in a hammock, that she hasn't got on her best stockings.

A woman will consult a clairvoyant to find out if her daughter is going to marry a millionaire, but when she is suspicious of her husband's fidelity she digs up the evidence herself.

Don Carlos as a Collector.
Don Carlos has spent a fortune on relics. His most interesting collection comprises relics of the various battles with which he has been identified, including a unique set of pictures depicting the engagements in which he has fought.

The Beard and Chin.
To possess a receding chin is no crime. It is merely a sign of weakness. But to conceal it with a huge and bushy beard and thereby to present the appearance of a man endowed with great strength of will is surely a false pretense.

Tit for Tat.—The Hon. Edward Everett, when a young man just out of college, was invited to give an oration in New York. At the dinner, Judge Story called up Mr. Everett by the following sentiment: "Fame follows applause where ever it (Everett) goes! Mr. Everett rose instantly, and gave the following: 'The members of the legal profession! However high may be their aspirations, they can never rise higher than one story!'"

WROTE HISTORY ON A BET.

Wm. H. Prescott's Unique Way of Forcing Himself to Work.

Rollo Ogden, in his brief and very readable biography of William H. Prescott, the historian, cites many passages from the diary showing Prescott's habit of flogging himself to his work by making wagers with his secretaries that he would complete a given task by a certain day, the odds always heavily against himself. "Prescott always took the betting on his own industry with perfect seriousness. Sometimes he would radiantly greet his secretary with 'You have lost! You owe me a dollar.' And he would exact payment. Occasionally he would with woe-begone countenance, produce and pay over to the protesting secretary the $20 or $30 he himself had lost." One elaborately made memorandum witnesses that a bet of $1 to $50 had been made "between E. B. Otis and William H. Prescott, Esq., the latter betting $50 that he will write 100 pages of his 'History of Peru' in 100 days."

PITHY POINTS.

Many a rich man has nothing but sympathy for the poor.
If fish could talk anglers would have to revise their yarns.
A summer girl's idea of economy is to make one hammock do for two.
Competition works both ways. It is either the life or death of trade.
Some men would rather tell agreeable lies than the disagreeable truth.
Some men are unable to stand up for their rights because their wives sit on them.

When a bachelor has more money than he can spend he should annex a wife.
Don't be too modest. Because of its modesty the lowly violet is frequently trampled under foot.

Possibly you may have observed that lots of girls marry during leap year who never married before.

Experience is a great teacher, but there are some conceited men who imagine they can teach experience.

Canada's Big Game Region.
The eyes of the world lately have been more and more directed to the extraordinary wonderland of the Canadian Rocky Mountains, to which tourists of wealth and fashion are now flocking.

In these forests and over these mountains roam the biggest game to be found on the continent, the grizzly and black bear, the panther, the lynx, elk, moose, deer, caribou and Rocky Mountain sheep and goat, and the innumerable lakes are at seasons almost covered with ducks, geese and swans. A hundred lodges in this vast wilderness offer their hospitality to the hunter, and from any of them he can set out with a guide and be sure of meeting with bighorn, grizzly or panther if he can stand the fatigue of the trail.—The Independent.

A Very Dangerous Trade.
The dangers of work in a white lead factory are interestingly described by a medical authority in a discussion of the causes and effects of lead poisoning. Most of the cases occur among the workers in the department where the preparation of the carbonate of lead is carried on by what is called the "Dutch process"—in which the lead, in sheets, is placed on the top of pots filled with acetic acid, and converted, first, into the subacetate, and finally decomposed by carbon dioxide emitted by tar. In moving the carbonate, clouds of white lead dust are easily caused by the workmen; and in spite of the respirators worn by them much of the poison is taken into the system.—Harper's Weekly.

Moon's Distance from Earth.
The mean distance of the moon from the earth is 238,850 miles. The maximum distance, however, may reach 252,830 miles, and the least distance to which it can approach the earth is 221,520 miles. The moon's diameter is 2162 miles, and if we deduct from its distance from the earth the sum of the two radii of the earth and moon, viz. 3962 and 1081 miles respectively, we shall have for the nearest approach of the surface of the two bodies 216,477 miles.

Didn't Feel That Way.
A Scottish singer named Wilson was being trained for professional singing. One day he sung a love song with exquisite quality of voice, but with insufficient passion and expression. His teacher told him he must put more feeling into it and sing as if he were really in love. "Oh, man," he replied, "how can I do that and me a married man?"

Few Americans in Manila.
The Manila Board of Health estimates the population of Manila, basing its figures on the preliminary rough count of the census of 1903, at 219,041. The Americans number 4,389; the Spaniards, 2,528; other Europeans, 1,117; Filipinos, 189,782; Chinese, 21,230; all others, 955.

New Deposits of Fuller's Earth.

His Christmas Surprise.

How a Wall Street Employee Was Rewarded for Years of Faithful Service.

In a large New York business institution there was an employee whose Christmas gift had the saving grace of individual consideration. He was a bookkeeper, nearly 40 years in harness, and he had been overlooked in former years of fatness in Wall street, except for a customary and unvarying $10 gold piece, says the Detroit Free Press. Several days before Christmas last year the office became agitated with rumors of an unprecedented flood of good fortune. The old bookkeeper tried to keep calm, but his hopes ran riot, and the day before Christmas found him in a nervous flurry. He saw his fellow employees called into the cashier's office one by one, each returning with a sealed envelope. The bookkeeper waited for his summons, but it came not, says the World's Work. Even the office boy emerged, biting new gold pieces to test them, and the roll was complete an hour before the bookkeeper summoned courage to send in an inquiry whether a mistake had been made in the case of Mr. Blank, and whether an envelope had been overlooked. The answer was: "There is no envelope for Mr. Blank, but the president wishes to see him for a moment."

The bookkeeper saw only one interpretation. This meant his discharge for failing efficiency. He fairly tottered into the sanctum, a pitiful figure of panic fear. "Sit down, Mr. Blank," said the president. "I have omitted your name in the list of Christmas rewards for faithful service, and I regret that the bank will have to find another man to fill your position after to-morrow. Compose yourself, sir, tears are undignified in this office. You should know better after being here for so long a term of service. Don't go. I have a few words more to say before you leave. The directors have decided to retire you on full pay for the rest of your life, and the year's salary will be paid to you in advance. This does not establish a ruinous precedent, for employees with 38 years of faithful service to their credit are not sprinkled very plentifully through Wall street."

Beware of Counterfeits.

"DeWitt's is the only genuine Witch Hazel Salve" writes J. L. Tucker, of Centre, Ala. "I have used it in my family for Piles, Cuts, and Burns for years and can recommend it to be the best Salve on the market. Every family should keep it, as it is an invaluable household remedy, and should always be kept on hand for immediate use." Mrs. Samuel Gage, of North Bush, N. Y., says: "I had a fever sore on my ankle for twelve years that the doctors could not cure. All salves and blood remedies proved worthless. I could not walk for over two years. Finally I was persuaded to try DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, which has completely cured me. It is a wonderful relief." DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cures without leaving a scar. Sold by G. R. Wiley. D. MICA, ITS VALUE AND USES.

Few Localities Produce Mica of Marketable Worth.

The value of mica is subject to market conditions. It is used mostly for doors of stoves, sides of lanterns and to some extent for insulating purposes in electrical work. Ground mica is used in the manufacture of wall paper. Large quantities are mined. There are few localities where merchantable mica are found, the present supply being particularly confined to North Carolina. Extensive mines were discovered in Mitchell County in that state in 1887.

Helping the Needy.
A lady who was very pertinacious in collecting money for charitable and other funds once wrote to a certain duke intimating that she had taken the liberty of putting down his name for a contribution of £100 for a hospital in which she was interested. The duke replied, "Dear Madam—I have just taken the liberty of putting down your name for a contribution of £100 for a hospital in which I am interested, so no money need pass between us."

Korean Postage Stamps.
The war has made a boom in Europe for Korea postage stamps. Japan established a postal system in Korea in 1884, but the stamps of the first issue are now very scarce, as the Koreans burned up most of it by setting fire to the post office at Seoul, as a protest against the innovation. Another issue was not made for ten years.

Character of the Chin.
A certain mold of chin betrays its owner as a man of considerable homicidal tendencies. Cover the lips with a waterlily mustache, drape the chin with an Assyrian beard, and it may well be that this murderous monster is a pleasing enough fellow to view. Such an one does not venture to pass clean-shaven through our streets. Let each one of us present in all candor such features as are his.

The Omnibus Bill.
"Omnibus bill" was the name generally given to a series of compromise measures embodied in one act and introduced in the U. S. senate by Henry Clay on January 29, 1850. It provided for the admission of California, Utah and New Mexico, for the abolition of the slave trade in the district of Columbia, and for the more speedy and certain return of fugitive slaves.

POINTERS.

The fool and his money are as easily parted as the wise man and his umbrella.

A beautiful woman may say anything; but happily she mostly doesn't know how.

Often by the time a man gets any laurels to rest on he has contracted chronic insomnia.

It is a decadent freedom which instead of shrieking in a crisis is content with leave to print.

Curious Burial Rule.
The following curious rule appears under paragraph 68 of the municipal regulations governing burial at Glessen, Hesse: "Interments are only permitted after death has taken place. In all other cases a certificate signed by the mayor is required."

Number of Visible Stars.
"If we ask a person to estimate the number of stars visible on a clear night," says Houzeau, "we shall have an exaggerated answer, the actual number only being a little over 300."

Water for the Horse.
A horse in good condition can exist about 25 days without food, so long as he has plenty of water. If he has food without water five days would probably end his existence.

Big Profit on a Farm.
After clearing a net profit of about $500 on his crops, C. W. Poindexter of Wilton, Me., has sold for $4,200 a farm which he bought a year ago for $3,200.

Egg Laying Competition.
Four hundred and twenty hens took part in an egg laying competition in Sydney, extending over 12 months. In all 68,572 eggs were laid, and the prize was won by a pen of Wyandottes with an average of 218 per hen.

Ancient Handcuffs.
Luther Wilcox of Portland, Conn., while plowing one of his fields unearthed a pair of handcuffs between 60 and 80 years old. The cuffs are coupled by a chain and can be tightened or loosened by a screw.

Stop Roosters' Crowing.
A Lowell, Mass., woman has complained to the board of health of that city asking the board to stop the roosters from crowing because she cannot sleep.

A bottle of ale was found imbedded in the masonry work of a church erected in 1859 at Orange, N. J., and which has just been torn down.

A Christmas Thought.

What is the thought of Christmas?—Giving.
What is the heart of Christmas?—Love.
What is the hope of Christmas?—Living.
What is the joy of Christmas?—Love.
No silver or gold is needed for giving, if the heart is filled with Christmas love.
For the hope of the world is kindly living, Learned from the joy of God above.

Christmas at the Universalist Church

A very interesting program is being arranged in observance of the Christmas-tide. On Saturday evening, Dec. 24, at 6 o'clock, a bountiful supper will be served free in the chapel to the members of the Sunday school, their relatives and all friends who may feel inclined to accept of this generous hospitality which has been many times extended to the public.

In the meantime, around the cheery fire on the hearth in the ladies' parlor, will be enjoyed the social good time, which, by the way, is sure to be of such nature that it will not detract from the real spirit which should predominate at this season. Then, early after supper, all will repair to the auditorium, where special unique preparations will have been made for the reception of Santa, who will not only bring gifts with him, but will also "boss the job" of distributing others which his assistants have brought before.

Now, by way of explanation, this Santa will not be the one of mythical origin who was manufactured, legitimately enough for the enjoyments of childish imagination, and who can, if he chooses, enter our homes through the keyhole of our common doors, or who may choose to come down our old, sooty chimney, but, nevertheless, he will be a real Santa, so big and proud and particular that a special chimney must be made so roomy and clean that he can easily get down and out of the fireplace, simply because of the novelty of the entrance and to be in keeping with the methods of the good old harmless myth. No child shall go away with the impression of deception on his mind for it is neither necessary nor right. We are not going to pretend to have what we have not. Santa will be preceded by several recitations and vocal music.

On Sunday forenoon the topic will be Christmas Thoughts. Miss Gibson will sing The Star of Bethlehem—one of the most beautiful Christmas solos.

In the evening will be rendered the most spirited music we have ever had for this particular occasion. The program will consist of solos, duets, choruses, and recitations.

All are invited to enjoy these evenings with us, and especially are those children invited who have no church or Sunday school home.
